

TSQ 11, 2

-General Editor's Introduction

The Trans Marxist Issue

INFO

Author(s): Gill-Peterson, Jules
Publication: TSQ
Volume, Issue: 11, 2
DOI: 10.1215/23289252-11215444

SUMMARY

"transition is less a volitional act of identification, let alone a subversion of the gender binary, than a concrete response to living and working in the world" (182) uses the story of Denise D'Anne to introduce the theme of trans marxism. D'Anne was a professional trans woman who, in 1969, traveled to Casablanca for GAS. when she returned to the US she lost her job and found herself limited to 'feminized' jobs. this experience motivated D'Anne to become a labor activist, advocating for improvements to women's wages and opportunities. D'Anne's activism only went as far as extending to her colleagues of nontrans professional white women, leaving 'undisturbed' underlying class dynamics which had allowed her to bypass the US's predatory system of medical transition which targeted poor ts sex workers. since wwii transition has become increasingly associated with middle class and professional interests, reforming individuals not only into 'conventional men/women, but into conventional workers for a sex-segmented labor market'.

KEYWORDS

class inequity, labor activism, medicalization, mtF, sex work

MAIN RELEVANCE

motivation of cis medical establishment's GAC of upward social mobility from sex work connections/disconnections from motives of anti-trans bills?

-A Small Piece of Red Sky to Fly In

Transition Pending Revolution

INFO

Author(s): Terán, Ira; Travis, Emrys
Publication: TSQ
Volume, Issue: 11, 2
DOI: 10.1215/23289252-11215457

SUMMARY

"'as transgender people, we must work to prove that our genders preexist the work we do to produce them and make them legible to others,' thus reproducing an embodied form of commodity fetishism" (188)

why is trans Marxism the theme? many prominent trans individuals are promoting Marxist analyses of trans identity. trans people are at the center of current anti-imperialist movements. trans people are also being targeted by legislation around their public existence which is inherently imperialist. the category of trans* has the potential to reinforce racial capitalism, due to its origins and contextualization of gender solely through a colonial gender binary within industrial society- seen most clearly in trans liberalism. instead trans Marxism views trans identity as 'nothing less than the bodily manifestation of a broader struggle for the reconfiguration of the human toward the coordinates of socialism'. thus 'trans studies' should be understood not as a subject position, but as mode of critique with a shared methodology. each article from the issue is then summarized.

KEYWORDS

anti-imperialism, anti-trans bills, commodity fetishism, trans studies

MAIN RELEVANCE

what is the definition & goal of trans studies?
 mentions current anti-trans legislation
 limits of language around trans* identity

-Coconstructing (Trans-)Capitalist Realism

Transition Activisms Collude in the Political Economy Structuring Anti-Trans Laws

INFO

Author(s): Gould, Wren Ariel
Publication: TSQ
Volume, Issue: 11, 2
DOI: 10.1215/23289252-11215470 (doesn't work?)

SUMMARY

"Transgender subjects... are attached to late capitalism, through their roles as consumers (of medicalized and nonmedicalized technologies of the body) and as workers (who either endorse late capitalism via assimilation or constitute... a surplus work force relegated to sex work that supports global sex trade as well as disciplining the global proletariat)... late capitalism necessarily and materially foregrounds transgender 'cultural crises'" (219)

critiques mainstream trans activism for overlooking class in their analysis of anti-trans laws and, ultimately, supporting the same late capitalist systems which anti-trans laws support. the author instead offers a framework of analyzing anti-trans laws not as universally authoritarian restrictions, but as austerity measures aimed at restricting poor (mainly poc) trans individuals' access to healthcare and at providing popular rationale for the defunding and privatization of publicly funded spaces, such as libraries. author advocates for a marxist approach to trans activism.

KEYWORDS

activism, anti-trans bills, authoritarianism, biopolitics, capitalism, medicalization, necropolitics, neoliberalism, nonUS, post-Marxist, US

MAIN RELEVANCE

centers on current anti-trans legislation in US, takes a global view on potential effects in the global south gives good idea of tsq's framework regarding anti-trans laws similarities in messaging/motivations of anti-trans bills and the responding activism potential area of research?

*Contours of a Historical Materialist Theory of Transsexuality

Claiming a Hopeful Origin Story as a Personal and Political Necessity

INFO

Author(s): Caselles, Eric Llaveria
Publication: TSQ
Volume, Issue: 11, 2
DOI: 10.1215/23289252-11215483

SUMMARY

"quote" (page)

summary

KEYWORDS

critical ontology, historical materialism, Marxism-feminism

MAIN RELEVANCE

n/a

*The Political Economy of Sexual Identity

From Gender Performativity to Social Reproduction

INFO

Author(s): Monfort, Bruno
Publication: TSQ
Volume, Issue: 11, 2
DOI: 10.1215/23289252-11215496

SUMMARY

"quote" (p)

[replace] why is trans Marxism the theme? many prominent trans individuals are promoting Marxist analyses of trans identity. trans people are at the center of current anti-imperialist movements. trans people are also being targeted by legislation around their public existence which is inherently imperialist. the category of trans* has the potential to reinforce racial capitalism, due to its origins and contextualization of gender solely through a colonial gender binary within industrial society- seen most clearly in trans liberalism. instead trans Marxism views trans identity as 'nothing less than the bodily manifestation of a broader struggle for the reconfiguration of the human toward the coordinates of socialism'. thus 'trans studies' should be understood not as a subject position, but as mode of critique with a shared methodology. each article from the issue is then summarized.

KEYWORDS

embodiment, Marxism, negativity, performance, social reproduction

MAIN RELEVANCE

negativity?

*Femboys in the Factory

Trans Labor beyond Abjection?

INFO

Author(s):	Davin, Alexis
Publication:	TSQ
Volume, Issue:	11, 2
DOI:	10.1215/23289252-11215509

SUMMARY

"quote" (p)

[replace] why is trans Marxism the theme? many prominent trans individuals are promoting Marxist analyses of trans identity. trans people are at the center of current anti-imperialist movements. trans people are also being targeted by legislation around their public existence which is inherently imperialist. the category of trans* has the potential to reinforce racial capitalism, due to its origins and contextualization of gender solely through a colonial gender binary within industrial society- seen most clearly in trans liberalism. instead trans Marxism views trans identity as 'nothing less than the bodily manifestation of a broader struggle for the reconfiguration of the human toward the coordinates of socialism'. thus 'trans studies' should be understood not as a subject position, but as mode of critique with a shared methodology. each article from the issue is then summarized.

KEYWORDS

abjection, femboy, labor, performance, political economy, reification

MAIN RELEVANCE

n/a

*Shadows of the Empire/A New Hope

A Dialectical Critique of Gender Historicization & Utopian Desire in Isabel Fall's "Helicopter Story"

INFO

Author(s): Fulloon, JD
Publication: TSQ
Volume, Issue: 11, 2
DOI: 10.1215/23289252-11215522

SUMMARY

"quote" (p)

[replace] why is trans Marxism the theme? many prominent trans individuals are promoting Marxist analyses of trans identity. trans people are at the center of current anti-imperialist movements. trans people are also being targeted by legislation around their public existence which is inherently imperialist. the category of trans* has the potential to reinforce racial capitalism, due to its origins and contextualization of gender solely through a colonial gender binary within industrial society- seen most clearly in trans liberalism. instead trans Marxism views trans identity as 'nothing less than the bodily manifestation of a broader struggle for the reconfiguration of the human toward the coordinates of socialism'. thus 'trans studies' should be understood not as a subject position, but as mode of critique with a shared methodology. each article from the issue is then summarized.

KEYWORDS

dialectics, queer Marxism, historicization, homonationalism, reification

MAIN RELEVANCE

negativity?
 language?

*Epistemological Foundations of Transmarxism

Queer Dialectics & Marxist Humanism

INFO

Author(s): Adamson, Alex
Publication: TSQ
Volume, Issue: 11, 2
DOI: 10.1215/23289252-11215535

SUMMARY

"quote" (p)

[replace] why is trans Marxism the theme? many prominent trans individuals are promoting Marxist analyses of trans identity. trans people are at the center of current anti-imperialist movements. trans people are also being targeted by legislation around their public existence which is inherently imperialist. the category of trans* has the potential to reinforce racial capitalism, due to its origins and contextualization of gender solely through a colonial gender binary within industrial society- seen most clearly in trans liberalism. instead trans Marxism views trans identity as 'nothing less than the bodily manifestation of a broader struggle for the reconfiguration of the human toward the coordinates of socialism'. thus 'trans studies' should be understood not as a subject position, but as mode of critique with a shared methodology. each article from the issue is then summarized.

KEYWORDS

dialectics, historical materialism, Marxism humanism, transmarxism

MAIN RELEVANCE

n/a

-Becoming Spectral

Phantasmagorias of Late Capitalism & Trans Subjectivity in Hyper-pop

INFO

Author(s): Montgomery, Westley
Publication: TSQ
Volume, Issue: 11, 2
DOI: 10.1215/23289252-11215548

SUMMARY

"the bedsheet ghost becomes a figure that rejects discourses of knowability in a manner which... allows trans artists to meet the violence of perception" (371)

analyzes three hyperpop songs and their music videos: blackwinterwell's "OMEN"; laura les's "Haunted"; & quinn's "553021". each of these videos use the figure of the 'bedsheet ghost' to expand visually on 'sounding trans' through a phantasmagorical process of de-subjectivizing the 'trans body' by becoming spectral, thus resisting the inescapable commodification of the self which exists in late capitalism's ocularcentric culture.

NOTE

discusses theory around visual (printed) and sonic (oral) modes of language potential of using speeches/commentary/spoken rhetoric around transphobia and comparing with written legislation

KEYWORDS

alienation, (de-)subjectivity, music/sonic studies, late capitalism, pop culture, reality enforcement, US(&CA)

MAIN RELEVANCE

n/a

*Trans*agrarian Marxisms?

On Unruly Matters, Rural Sexualities, & Problematic Campesinas

INFO

Author(s): Gagliano, Jamie C.; Liebman, Alexander
Publication: TSQ
Volume, Issue: 11, 2
DOI: 10.1215/23289252-11215561

SUMMARY

"quote" (p)

[replace] why is trans Marxism the theme? many prominent trans individuals are promoting Marxist analyses of trans identity. trans people are at the center of current anti-imperialist movements. trans people are also being targeted by legislation around their public existence which is inherently imperialist. the category of trans* has the potential to reinforce racial capitalism, due to its origins and contextualization of gender solely through a colonial gender binary within industrial society- seen most clearly in trans liberalism. instead trans Marxism views trans identity as 'nothing less than the bodily manifestation of a broader struggle for the reconfiguration of the human toward the coordinates of socialism'. thus 'trans studies' should be understood not as a subject position, but as mode of critique with a shared methodology. each article from the issue is then summarized.

KEYWORDS

agrarian studies, development, transgender Marxism, queer Marxism

MAIN RELEVANCE

n/a

GLQ 30, 3

-Anti/social Abolitionism

INFO

Author(s): Hammes, Aaron
Publication: GLQ
Volume, Issue: 30, 3
DOI: 10.1215/10642684-11177950

SUMMARY

"quote" (p)

[replace] why is trans Marxism the theme? many prominent trans individuals are promoting Marxist analyses of trans identity. trans people are at the center of current anti-imperialist movements. trans people are also being targeted by legislation around their public existence which is inherently imperialist. the category of trans* has the potential to reinforce racial capitalism, due to its origins and contextualization of gender solely through a colonial gender binary within industrial society- seen most clearly in trans liberalism. instead trans Marxism views trans identity as 'nothing less than the bodily manifestation of a broader struggle for the reconfiguration of the human toward the coordinates of socialism'. thus 'trans studies' should be understood not as a subject position, but as mode of critique with a shared methodology. each article from the issue is then summarized.

KEYWORDS

trans, Marxism, medicalization, class privilege, sex work

MAIN RELEVANCE

n/a

*Sex Hotels & Squirting Workshops

Queering the Value(s) of Pleasure in & beyond Mexico City

INFO

Author(s):	Luna, Sarah
Publication:	GLQ
Volume, Issue:	30, 3
DOI:	10.1215/10642684-11177958

SUMMARY

[replace] why is trans Marxism the theme? many prominent trans individuals are promoting Marxist analyses of trans identity. trans people are at the center of current anti-imperialist movements. trans people are also being targeted by legislation around their public existence which is inherently imperialist. the category of trans* has the potential to reinforce racial capitalism, due to its origins and contextualization of gender solely through a colonial gender binary within industrial society- seen most clearly in trans liberalism. instead trans Marxism views trans identity as 'nothing less than the bodily manifestation of a broader struggle for the reconfiguration of the human toward the coordinates of socialism'. thus 'trans studies' should be understood not as a subject position, but as mode of critique with a shared methodology. each article from the issue is then summarized.

KEYWORDS

trans, Marxism, medicalization, class privilege, sex work

MAIN RELEVANCE

n/a

-Introduction

INFO

Author(s): Reddy, Chandan; Snorton, C. Riley
Publication: GLQ
Volume, Issue: 30, 3
DOI: 10.1215/10642684-11177966

SUMMARY

introduces issue's theme of 'queer of color critique in a moment of crisis' presented in 'accessible formats'. chosen as a response to US right-wing attacks of critical race theory and ethnic studies- many of the papers were first presented at a canadian conference on 'queer of color critique' in response to ron desantis' rhetoric. the issue centers a "politics of solidarity" as a central element of queer of color critique, which is why some articles are focused on 'afab' topics, rather than specifically queer/trans issues, saying "defending women... is at the very heart of what matters to, or ought to matter to, queer studies today". ends by mentioning israel's siege of gaza, and palestinian liberation as a future setting of solidarity.

NOTES

the inclusion of article which focuses on 'afab' sex workers reflects the editors belief that protecting (afab) women sex workers should be a top priority of the queer movement. noticeable absence of mentioning anti-trans bills or the vastly disproportionate rates of sex work when comparing cis women/'afabs' and trans women.

interesting correlation with motivation of anti-trans bills as protecting cis women (both from trans women, and from potentially transitioning to trans men), which reflects gould's article in tsq about anti-trans and trans-affirming activists having similar motivations.

KEYWORDS

anti-trans bills(ish), crt, noTransMent, palestine, queer studies, solidarity

MAIN RELEVANCE

frames articles within context of current right-wing politics

-Queer of Color Critique in a Moment of Danger

Envisioning Solidarities

INFO

Author(s): Ferguson, Roderick A.; Gopinath, Gayatri; Keeling, Kara; Manalansan IV, Martin F.;
Reddy, Chandan

Publication: GLQ

Volume, Issue: 30, 3

DOI: 10.1215/10642684-11177974

SUMMARY

edited transcript of panel from the aforementioned conference. largely focused on the panelists reflecting on 'deciding the course of queer studies' over a dinner out in the 1990s when all were getting doctoral degrees at elite institutions. many of the contributors to this issue, even those not listed within this interview, are referenced as being at this dinner and at the conference panel, revealing an existing social circle behind the curation of this issue. panelists emphasize their doctoral educations being possible because of affirmative action policies in place at the time.

NOTE

interesting compartmentalization of trans identity as largely ignored (even when discussing right-wing "anti-queer" rhetoric in florida, etc.), until one (cis gay) panelists mentions attending a performance about "unmediated access to the trans body on display", whose power comes from 'queer performance' to a 'queer public', flattening trans identity to its usefulness to a broader (largely non-trans) 'queer community'

KEYWORDS

academia, anti-trans bills(ish), Black studies, ethnography, feminism, identity politics, Latine studies, palestine, queer=nontrans, queer studies, sex work, solidarity, space making, transMent reveals that almost all contributors of this issue are an "intellectual family" established in the 1990s & early 2000s

MAIN RELEVANCE

-Queer of Color Critique & the Decriminalization of Sex Work

INFO

Author(s): Rodríguez, Juana María
Publication: GLQ
Volume, Issue: 30, 3
DOI: 10.1215/10642684-11177982

SUMMARY

focuses on 'afab' sex workers reflects the editors belief that protecting (afab) women sex workers should be a top priority of the queer movement. afab sex worker focus, author mentions. noticeable absence of mentioning anti-trans bills or the vastly disproportionate rates of sex work when comparing cis women/'afabs' and trans women. queer vs feminist perspectives

NOTES

seems to fall under the impression that one mention of the 'black trans sex worker' as a central figure in a referenced text compensates for a lack of further trans analysis, misgendering and erasing of trans men, and implicit focus on 'afabs' apparent source of article seems to contradict authors 'thesis' ignores the non-stagnant nature of gender, many impacted may have transitioned and now be part of the group the author positions them as opposing aforementioned text centers the 'Black drag queen prostitute' subject because she "exceeds the racialized boundaries of gender and sex ideals" mentions amnesty, hrw, and who all support global decriminalization of adult sex work interesting because many of these int. 'human rights' orgs. receive lobbying efforts directed towards their 'female health' and 'women's rights/empowerment' sectors from people/groups who are also at the forefront of lobbying for anti-trans legislation in the usa, the most extreme being women's declaration international.

KEYWORDS

feminism, porn studies, queer studies, sex work, terfs, transMent

MAIN RELEVANCE

n/a

-The Sissy That Walks

The Transformations of an Abject Figure

INFO

Author(s): Anderson, Jovanté
Publication: GLQ
Volume, Issue: 30, 3
DOI: 10.1215/10642684-11177990
Review of: Sissy Insurgencies: A Radical Anatomy of Unfit Manliness
By: Ross, Marlon B.

SUMMARY

"If we take Tiffany seriously as an insurgent sissy, then, at least some of Ross's theoretical attention might have also been invested in examining the interstitial and co-constituting space between trans and cis masculinities" (345)

review of Sissy Insurgencies by Ross, which seeks to complicate the academic understanding of the 'Black sissy' from only being a tool used to denigrate Black men who are seen as lacking the strategic masculinity needed to fight white supremacy, to also being a role which itself is strategically deployed by Black men to 'negotiate the demands of cultural and political institutions', and counter associations of Black masculinity with aggression, particularly when engaging in critique of white supremacy.

NOTE

language and perception around trans men, and 'transfags', specifically reviewer noted the book's lack of consideration of Black trans masculinities but used she/her when referring to trans 'sissies' only

KEYWORDS

Black power movement, Black studies, effeminacy, masculinity, transMent, US, white supremacy

MAIN RELEVANCE

n/a

-The Ontologies of Putas

Feeling the Visual Archive of Sex Work & Working Sex

INFO

Author(s): Hernandez, Yessica Garcia
Publication: GLQ
Volume, Issue: 30, 3
DOI: 10.1215/10642684-11177998
Review of: Putas Life: Seeing Latinas, Working Sex
By: Rodríguez, Juana María

SUMMARY

review of Putas Life by Rodríguez, in which the author explores her connections as a Latina woman who is confident in her sexuality to the experiences of sex workers. looks at Mexican state archives of sex workers, focusing on a trans masc worker (through a "queer" lens). looks at the "queer potential of femme friendship" among queer women ethnographers and their subjects, aging sex workers. ends with assertion that this work is groundbreaking within porn studies and related fields because "it takes sex work seriously" (does not seem groundbreaking within these fields?)

NOTE

not really about race? (or queer studies?) does not make any mentions or specifics towards the racial make-up of the subject, beyond passing mention of an afro-latina porn star, but only in regards to "Latinx studies". cuba, mexico, and puerto rico are focused on, all of which have a colonial history and nonhomogeneous racial makeup author of book being reviewed also wrote article in this issue, both of which approach sex work almost exclusively through the lens of cis women, "queering the lens" by misgendering trans men for feminist critique

KEYWORDS

feminism, Latina studies, nonUS(ish), sex work, transMent

MAIN RELEVANCE

feels out of place in glq? only mentions queer identity in passing one sentence about a trans masculine sex worker (who is introduced as an example of a woman), and one paragraph about a trans woman who was a sex worker "for a brief moment" in the US

-Embodying Hope on the Dance Floor

INFO

Author(s): Grasso, Jordan C.
Publication: GLQ
Volume, Issue: 30, 3
DOI: 10.1215/10642684-11209678
Review of: Feels Right: Black Queer Women & the Politics of Partying in Chicago
By: Adeyemi, Kemi

SUMMARY

review of Feels Right by Adeyemi, a book about how 'Black queer women' use dance to occupy space amidst the gentrifying landscape of Chicago. touches on fields of geography, space making, and Black queer feminist theory. ends with the assertion that the utopian possibility of these spaces is limited by their inextricability from the neoliberal city which surrounds them.

NOTE

subjects and linguistic choices related to transness in Feels Right remind me of quote from Gill-Peterson introduction: "it has become possible to claim with a straight face that it is politically radical not to medically transition and instead reduce gender to a matter of private taste in clothes and pronouns, as if those were not quintessentially bourgeois criteria for advancing antitranssexual interests directly against poor trans women."

KEYWORDS

Black studies, ethnography, queer=nontrans, neoliberalism, noTransMent, space making, US

MAIN RELEVANCE

consideration of explicitly trans issues/experiences is not a requirement of GLQ

uses 'queer women' to refer to glb+ "afab"s distancing from tradition of, "violence promoted by ethnographers that produces modes of surveillance, control, and, potentially, lies" similarities in approaching a scientific field from an untraditional perspective?

-Triangulating Sexual Politics in India

INFO

Author(s): Murarka, Shubhra
Publication: GLQ
Volume, Issue: 30, 3
DOI: 10.1215/10642684-11209704
Review of: Pink Revolutions: Globalization, Hindutva, & Queer Triangles in Contemporary India
By: Shahani, Nishant

SUMMARY

"revolution does not necessarily always lead to radical change or progress; rather, revolution exists in uneasy alliances, messy entanglements, and triangulations, and can even result in the opposite of radical progress" (355)

review of Pink Revolutions by Shahani, a book which attempts to triangulate how the three forces of global modernity and neoliberalism; Hindu nationalism, and queer politics shape and influence one another. touches on fields of South Asian studies, globalization, political science, and Dalit studies. focuses largely on the promotion of 'gay tourism' as an attempt at 'redeeming' Delhi after it was labeled the 'rape capital' of the world. the review criticizes the book for being over-ambitious and lacking analytical depth.

NOTE

review (and/or book?) seem to situate 'queer rights' within India as exclusively for foreign tourists, rather than gay and trans Indians

KEYWORDS

globalization, queer=nontrans, nationalism, nonUS, noTransMent, politics

MAIN RELEVANCE

consideration of explicitly trans issues/experiences is not a requirement of GLQ

large focus on contextualizing political developments in relation to queer rights/identity

-Limited Steps towards Decolonization

Or, Where is Trans & Travesti Thought?

INFO

Author(s): Spinelli, Miro
Publication: GLQ
Volume, Issue: 30, 3
DOI: 10.1215/10642684-11209730
Review of: Minoritarian Liberalism: A Travesti Life in a Brazilian Favela
By: Lino e Silva, Moisés

SUMMARY

"queer residents feel much safer in Rocinha than in other higher-class neighborhoods, contradicting the expectation of the "normative" liberal view. The "law of the Hillside" protects queer folks in a much more direct way than the nation-state... exemplifying how the nondemocratic power of the faction safeguards the freedom to express sexual and gender diversity" (357) review of Minoritarian Liberalism by Lino e Silva, an ethnographic field study and book about the life of Natasha Kellen Bündchen: a travesti who lived in Rocinha, Rio de Janeiro's largest favela. Lino e Silva distinguishes between 'normative' and 'minoritarian' liberalism, defending the latter as 'groups that do not aim at imposing their own standards as a universal rule.' Lino e Silva proposes minoritarian liberalism as a framework to 'decolonize' liberalism. the reviewer does not think the author fully engages with critiques of liberalism, specifically that it is inextricable from colonialism and the ensuing structural inequalities. also criticized for the absence of references to trans studies or travesti scholars.

KEYWORDS

class privilege, (de-)colonialism, neoliberalism, nonUS, politic, transMent

MAIN RELEVANCE

large focus on political theory and science